

TSA

11/22/2010

Currently, the flying public has had their fourth amendment rights violated at the airports. The action stems from the TSA agents of Homeland security causing the public to be subjected to virtual strip down through the use of penetrating technology to 'see' through clothes down to the clear definition of genitalia. The public walks through portals. The alleged purpose of the scans is to look for hidden contraband such as guns, knives, or explosives. Should the public not want to be subjected to the scan an alternate is provided; hand pat-downs. The pat-downs are also intrusive as the agent is allowed to slide their hand up a person's leg until it reaches something solid; genitals. The pat-down also includes the touching of breasts and rear ends; nothing is sacred.

The public outcry is growing and the government says they are listening to the public. The screenings are being done so at the behest of Obama. The public is being encouraged by others to elect the pat-down because it takes so much longer to accomplish. Such actions are intended to disrupt the flow of persons through the screenings and cripple the 'security' screenings, all in the name of national security.

The downside to all of this is the following: The government will crack down on the alleged disrupters, whether they are or not, irrespective of a person's feeling their privacy is being invaded; thus, the government shall make examples of 'disrupters' by arresting them, detaining them in jail, and setting up 'courts' to determine the fate of the traveler. The example will strike fear into the populace and render them helpless of any recourse; therefore, terrorism shall be exercised upon the general public and the cries, "We are doing this for your own good" shall be heard.

The populace are being pushed to do something in the streets. All out rioting against the government shall be the catalyst to suspend the Constitution and, therefore, the rights of the citizens of the United States.

The hoof beats of the One World Government are becoming louder. The populace is being funneled.
