Feature the following: the entirety of the known and unknown universe – all of what is considered to be space where stars and planets now exist did not exist; there was nothingness. Then God did something; He created the heaven and the earth. According to Genesis, the earth, as God named it, was without form and void and existed alone.

God, according to the record, did not make up a bunch of planets and stars and, pointing His finger at one of them say, “I think I’ll pick that one!” No, the only body in the limitlessness of space was Earth. Earth was and is the focus of God.
